About

Aymeric Grange, after graduating from a leading business school, worked as a consumer goods strategy consultant in Paris and New York.

Together with his partner Thomas Arnaudo, they founded a zero-waste bathroom brand: 900.Care. A company fighting against plastic waste in bathrooms. Their concept is based on reusable recycled plastic bottles and cardboard refills, thus reducing single-use plastics.

They have developed innovative products, such as shower gel in stick form, to reduce water transport and carbon emissions. Aymeric Grange and his team have managed to mobilize a committed community through crowdfunding campaigns.

Co-Founder

900.care

Jul 2019 - today - 4 years 4 months

Founded by two optimists who want to change the world with a smile, 900.care is a brand of refillable bathroom products: shower gel and hand foaming gel in dissolvable stick form, toothpaste in chewable tablet form and deodorant in refillable bottle form.

900 is the average number of seconds we spend taking care of ourselves every morning and evening.

Convinced that these 900 seconds should be as joyful as they are eco-friendly, they create products that are good for you and good for the planet.

It's been a while we were thinking about changing our Go-To-Market strategy with my co-founder. We had instincts on what needed to be done but we wanted to get validation from experienced people in our niche. We booked 3 calls with 3 expert in 3 days. It didn't fail. They help use refine our strategy in details and helped us build a clear roadmap for the next year.

Better Call is now my go-to ressource when I need quick inputs from experts on a specific topics.
